Vincent van Gogh

Provenance four works

The paintings were found in the neighbourhood of Nuenen where Vincent lived with his parents for a while. His youngest sister had contact with the daughter of Pieter Kruijsse's, whom Vincent later came in contact with.

Pieter Kruijsse was a therapist in a psychiatric institution at that time, Huize Padua, gave painting lessons and founded the painting department there, they worked very professionally with good material and they received thorough painting lessons.

Vincent regularly visited Pieter Kruijsse and sometimes stayed with him and his wife in Erp for weeks. The house where they lived was recently emptied, and these paintings were found.

The Van Gogh Museum has very different interests than examining the hundreds of works that they are offered for research every year, moreover they do not have the budget for it, the research they can do is very little and they only give advice.

The Seller/owner has considered DNA research but since they have been active in the art world for over thirty years and have so much experience that they can say for sure that these must have been painted by Vincent van Gogh.

The seller/owner have done research into this for years and should be able to show their efforts to any potential buyer.
